History - Phi Sigma

On April 5, 1878, six young men, Gerald H. Beard, W. (William) Harrington Beard, Robert Jeneson, John W. Mabbs, C. (Charles) Herbert Small, and Henry B. Wilson, formed a literary society in Chicago, Illinois. Their first meeting was held at the Beard Brothers Book Store on 453 West Madison Street (now 1308 W. Madison St., between Ada and Throop Sts.). "In the corner of that store on a bench, two chairs, a stool and a keg (I think there was a keg - empty keg) the old Phi Sigma started!" (W. Harrington Beard). Initially, the group struggled with naming itself and members simply referred to themselves as the "Class." By March 1879, the name "Phi Sigma" was chosen as the Greek name for "Knowledge Seekers."

The group formed with the purpose to "devise ways to aid in the study of literature and history and to afford an opportunity for practice in debate." During its first few months, members devoted themselves to serious study, critique, and presentations. As time went on, the weekly "degenerated into a good deal of boys frolic." As a result, Mr. Beard proposed a disbandment of the group in January 1879. However, this proposal was "voted down and with a promise to do better in the future."

In February 1882, William Hulin proposed admitting female members to Phi Sigma. At the March 21, 1882 meeting, six women joined the group: Jennie H. Allen, Frederica Beard, Vivien Cowles, Minnie Hanley, May G. Harsha, and Alice G. Hinchliffe.

Phi Sigma regularly published a compilation of papers call "The Voice of the Phi Sigma," or "The Voice," and presented them at meetings. The first volume was issued on June 10, 1879 and every two weeks thereafter. Since the members of Phi Sigma dedicated themselves to "mental improvement," "The Voice" served as an outlet for debate, information, news, and study. An editor was picked by the Chairman (later, the President) of the organization four weeks prior to the release of the issue. Topics covered in "The Voice" spanned many subjects such as History, English Language and Literature, Travel, Current Events, Philosophy, Religion, Inventions, etc. Many issues also include announcements about members and "squibs" sections that include jokes, riddles, word puzzles, and quotations. Over time, the publications recurred less often and by 1900, "The Voice" was issued annually.

Although study was the priority of Phi Sigma, the group became a strong social organization as well. Many early members married one another and they held annual picnics in Lake Forest, Illinois. The Phi Sigma Camping Club was incorporated in 1891 after several members ventured to Twin Lakes, Wisconsin in July 1890 to visit Dr. Walter May Fitch's cottage. Phi Sigmites have also held many annual banquets for New Year's celebrations and anniversaries of the group.

Members and guests continue to gather monthly from October to May at the home of one of the members. A talk is featured at each meeting, presented by a group member, focused on a theme selected at the beginning of the season. There is discussion of the topic after each talk. Phi Sigma today continues in accordance with its long traditions first established in that Chicago bookstore. The May meeting traditionally has its members engaged in an outing, a party, or a field trip to wrap up the class or season of that particular year.

Phi Sigma annually published programs which contained membership rosters and the scheduled meetings' information. At each meeting, members would report papers, debate one another, present poetry, art, and/or music, or read their publication, The Voice. These programs include the information for each Phi Sigma meeting, such as the names of members who reported that evening, the topics discussed, and the titles of papers.

http://digitalcommons.colum.edu/phisigma\_camping/Camping Club Documents and Photographs, 1890-1891

Prior to 1890, members of Phi Sigma held an annual picnic on the Fourth of July in Lake Forest, Illinois. In 1890, Dr. Walter M. Fitch, a member of the society, invited members to his cottage in Twin Lakes, Wisconsin for a camping trip instead of a picnic. By 1891, the campers officially incorporated a group called the Phi Sigma Camping Club in order to hold an encampment annually. Although the annual camping trip no longer takes place, Phi Sigma members still participate in an annual May Outing or May Party.

Selected Letters, 1888-1903

The Selected Letters collection represents early writings and correspondence of Phi Sigma members. Papers range from 1888 to 1903, chronicling anniversaries and special events of the organization. Many of the papers document the history and founding of the organization.

The Voice of the Phi Sigma, 1879-1954

The Voice of the Phi Sigma, also referred to as simply, The Voice, is a publication created by the social organization, Phi Sigma.
